Sausages anyone?

Tech. Sgt. B. Coors-Davidson

Staff Sgt. Jai Williams, 355th Services Squadron, prepares Italian sausages as part of the lunchtime meal for troops during the Operational Readiness Exercise held here July 11 to 18. Breakfast, lunch, dinner and a mid-night meal were prepared each day during Phase II of the ORE by 355th SVS for personnel. For more information on the ORE, see "D-M prepares for ORI," Page 14.

Leadership key in ORE

By Major Gary Carruthers
355th Wing Public Affairs

"Our success is now all about leadership!" said Col. Larry Stutzriem, 355th Wing commander, following a grueling two-week operational readiness exercise.

D-M just completed the third in a series of OREs designed to prepare the installation for both an Operational Readiness Inspection in November and real-world taskings. The goal for the wing is crystal clear — increase D-M's readiness to deploy and fight when called.

"We are working extremely hard and there's no lack of sweat or talent in our awesome airmen," notes Stutzriem, "but we need to clearly examine what's on the combat edge and what we still need to chisel into fighting shape over the next three months."

The exercise was suspended twice to address issues in the generation and regeneration of aircraft on the flightline.

"We don't have time to wait. We need to get it right today," said Lt. Col. Ken Carlson, Exer-

A man who has dedicated more hours than can be counted to researching Davis-Monthan's aviation history gave a briefing

July 16 to discuss a significant piece of that history.

"The Davis-Monthan Aviation Field Transient Register is the most significant civil, commercial and military aviation artifact from the southwest U.S.," said Dr. Gary Hyatt.

The register is a book, which is maintained at base operations. The pilots who landed at D-M signed the book between 1925 and 1936.

12th AF commander bids farewell

By Lt. Gen. William Hobbins
12th Air Force commander

Unbeknownst to most of you, I have a 20-year record: almost three years at the helm of 12th Air Force and I'm very happy to claim that. While here, I have had the distinct honor of commanding nearly 50,000 of America's most dedicated and capable airmen.

Although my tenure may seem long, it has flown by because of the sheer enjoyment of working with our magnificent airmen, civilians and families. During this time, there have been perhaps, too many successes and achievements to list. I would like to first highlight a few of the lesser known, but to me, worthy missions of U.S. South Air Force and 12th Air Force.

While most people think the only mission of 12th Air Force is to put bombs on target and defeat the enemy at every turn (which we do very well); it is heart warming to reflect that in the past three years we have made a significant and lasting personal impact in bettering thousands of impoverished lives throughout the globe.

In 2002 alone, 29 medical readiness training exercises deployed to 11 countries and treated 107,735 patients, conducted 404 surgeries and trained 503 medics. Through the New Horizons programs, we constructed schools, clinics and wells to improve the living conditions of remote sites in Latin America.

Spouses groups, the Top Three and a host of squadrons and groups conducted donation drives to deliver needed books, education supplies, shoes, toiletries, glasses and clothing to orphanages and shelters for homeless children in Latin America.

Our forward operating locations in Soto Cano, Honduras; Manta, Ecuador; Curacao, Aruba and Puerto Rico aided local communities through charities and by volunteering thousands of hours to assist in neighboring schools and clinics. The Coronet Oak C-130 mission out of Puerto Rico, in addition to their regular duties, also graciously delivered Christmas presents on a space-available basis throughout Latin America.

In short, you, the men and women of 12th Air Force, have made a permanent and meaningful change in the lives of those less fortunate. I thank you on their behalf. I would offer a "very well done" in our more "traditional" accomplishments. The active, reserve and guard components of 12th deployed thousands of people and equipment to ensure our success in Operations Iraqi

Team D-M Mission Spotlight

The 355th Civil Engineer Squadron is an integrated team of professionals. The 355th CES plans, builds, sustains and protects Davis-Monthan Air Force Base and its environment while providing combat ready deployable forces.

The disaster preparedness and explosive ordnance disposal teams gives the squadron a complete readiness picture, adding emergency response capabilities for all phases of peacetime and wartime contingencies.

The disaster preparedness team provides training to the base's military population on the proper use of the ground crew ensemble. The training is invaluable to members serving in hostile areas. It teaches military members to detect a chemical or biological attack and how to react to an attack.

cise Evaluation Team chief.

Stutzriem added, "As tough as it was for our maintainers to redo some actions, we were hammering away to improve leadership performance. We wire-brushed our standards; how we train, how we measure our progress and how we make control inputs when necessary. This exercise was not about punishing ourselves, it was about punishing our enemy with a world-class team of warriors."

There were high praises for impressive improvements across the Desert Lightning team. One area noted for its improvement is the mobility machine that prepares personnel and cargo for deployment.

"The growth in this area between our first exercise in April and this exercise is staggering," said Stutzriem. "Young airmen and officers running this machine, as well as the unit deployment managers, have savagely conquered past shortcomings by keeping the ultimate goal of flying and fighting in focus," he added.

Another area that showed significant improvement was the Information Operations Conditions implementation process. This has to do with preventing an enemy from disrupting computer-based information command and control systems.

"Since the last exercise in June, the wing established new procedures to simplify the INFOCON checklist, as well as make compliance reporting and tracking easier," said Tech. Sgt. Nedra Hunt, 355th Communications Squadron NCO in charge of the Information Assurance office.

"Rather than have 260 work group managers reporting individual work center actions directly to the Information Assurance office, the work group managers worked the issues in their areas and channeled their reports to 29 Unit IA Monitors. These monitors then reported compliance to the IA office," said Hunt.

"This change resulted in faster implementation of the procedures, more complete reporting of the results and ultimately better protection of our data and systems," continued Hunt.

Other areas that showed improvement from the previous two exercises included implementation of force protection measures, set-up of the exercise play area and the focus on safety throughout the exercise. Safety was especially noteworthy because of the challenges associated with July's high temperatures and severe weather from the seasonal monsoons.

"Involvement by all team players has made each ORE better than the previous one in terms of incidents, despite the relentless heat," said Lt. Col. Tom Feldhausen, 355th Wing chief of safety. "We've shown that we can have a sense of urgency while avoiding the senseless urgency that results in dangerously cutting corners."

According to the top commanders, what's needed to bring the entire wing to top-level readiness in the next three months is a renewed emphasis on basic leadership that sets and enforces standards, focuses on basic task disciplines and inspires by getting out in front to lead their people each step of the way. "We are going to be ready for the fight," said Col. Mike Spencer, 355th Wing vice commander. "Our airmen are giving a hundred percent, and leadership development will be key to the next exercise."

The Wing commander agrees and adds that the Air Combat Command commander said the first duty of leadership is to teach.

"We are responsible for nurturing our airmen while also developing leaders. When we expect an airman on the flightline to perfectly preflight an aircraft when it's 130 degrees on the ramp, we better have the same tough expectations for our leaders at all levels. That includes me," Stutzriem concluded.

Book

‘adopted’ Davis-Monthan’s aviation history to explore,” said Gwen Lisa, 355th Civil Engineer Squadron natural and cultural resource manager.

An act of simple chance brought the D-M register into Hyatt’s life.

“I was in an aviation antique store in Alexandria, Va., in June 2000,” said Hyatt. “A friend handed a book to me and asked if it was something I was interested in. It was still in my hand when I reached the check-out counter, so I bought it.”

“When I started thumbing through it, I said ‘holy smokes!’ There were signatures of Lindbergh, Earhart and Hap Arnold among others.”

Hyatt’s D-M register is a copy of the original book located in the D-M base operations building. The register became a very time consuming element in Hyatt’s life when he decided to commit the entire book to a computer database. Some of the information included in the database are the names of the pilots and passengers, the types and registration numbers of planes they flew to D-M, the pilot’s home station and the date they arrived here. The construction of the database took Hyatt four months and is continuously being updated as he learns more.

The database allows searches for various information contained in the log quickly and efficiently. It documents the 3,691 landings, which occurred at D-M from Feb. 6, 1925 to Nov. 25, 1936. Of these landings, 1,913 were military landings and 1,778 were civilian landings, including 58 landings by 41 female pilots.

“Ten percent of the certified population of female pilots at that time signed the book,” said Hyatt. Many of the women who landed here at that time were on their way to flying competitions, such as the National Air Races ‘Powder Puff Derbies.’ Many of the women held various records for tasks such as in-flight refueling and flight racing. Florence “Pancho” Barnes stopped here while making history. She was the first female to pilot a plane round-trip to Mexico. Earhart also signed the register having landed here three times. None of the female pilots are still here today.

“I intend to share the information I have and to place the database online,” said Hyatt. While Hyatt does have a Web site started at www.dmairfield.com, the site is still under construction.

“The register is a testimony of the importance of Tucson in Golden Age aviation history.”

Some very special people came through here in the ‘20’s and ‘30’s who still affect our lives today, said Hyatt. They include Donald Douglas (Douglas Aircraft), Larry Bell (Bell Helicopters), Bill Lear (Lear Jets), Reuben Fleet (Consolidated Aircraft), Hap Arnold and many more officers who influenced the outcomes of our wars over the years.

The research has had many facets, said Hyatt. It has been an exhilarating process.

The most rewarding part according to Hyatt has been meeting people who actually signed the book. Shaking hands with Bobbi Trout, John Miller and William Piper Jr., has been very satisfying.

“I met Bobbi Trout last September,” said Hyatt. “She was the last surviving female signer of the book. She was an aviation pioneer, known for her early in-flight refueling flights. She signed the book in 1929. Unfortunately, she passed away in January. Every time we lose one of the pilots it is like having a library burn to the ground.”

John Miller is still flying at the age of 96, said Hyatt. “He was the first person to fly an autogiro across the country. He landed here on both legs of that trip in 1931.”

William Piper Jr. landed here in ‘34, said Hyatt. “He was flying though on the way to California to develop a sales network for the Taylor Cub. The most amazing part is that I discovered Piper is my neighbor.”

“I think every reader of your paper needs to understand the book that lives in base operations is a living history of aviation,” said Hyatt.

In the future Hyatt plans to make another trip to the base to share more of his knowledge of the D-M register.

Roche to join Order of the Sword

Tech. Sgt. Carl Norman

Air Force Materiel Command Public Affairs

Air Force noncommissioned officers will bestow their highest honor on the secretary of the Air Force as they induct him into the service's Order of the Sword on Sept. 13 at Andrews Air Force Base, Md.

Dr. James Roche received word of his induction during the recent Town Hall Meeting at the Air Force Museum at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, Ohio, June 5.

During the meeting, Roche, Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. John Jumper and Chief Master Sgt. of the Air Force Gerald Murray fielded questions from 300 people about various Air Force issues.

As closing discussions focused on Roche's pending nomination to become secretary of the Army, Murray told the secretary all the Air Force command chiefs contacted him and wanted him to pass on a message.

"Mr. Secretary, we absolutely cannot believe that your nomination will not go forward, and we recognize that you'll soon be leaving to become the secretary of the Army," Murray said. "We are envious of the Army, but are thankful for the time we've had you as secretary."

"In this forum today, I would like to request that you join the enlisted men and women of the United States Air Force on the occasion to be inducted into the United States Air Force Order of the Sword in a ceremony."

Pushing his glasses to the top of his head and wiping tears, Roche accepted an Order of the Sword plaque from Murray and said he was truly honored with the induction invitation.

"This is something I would not have expected — I didn't think I had worked long enough or hard enough to ever come near to earning this," he said.

"Thank you all very much; you'll always be in my heart."

Reflecting on Roche's time as Air Force secretary, Jumper said the service has never had a secretary who has cared more about people.

"When I say our people, I mean every kind of person — military or civilian, (Air National) Guard or Reserve, minority or majority or those who feel they've not been cared for or are on the back burner of the Air Force," Jumper said. "The secretary has managed to be out there in touch with every one of those groups. If the nomination (to become secretary of the Army) does come through, we'll support (our) new secretary with all the vigor we always do, but there will be a big empty spot in our hearts for Secretary Roche."

Historical records show that the Order of the Sword started unofficially in the 1500s. In 1522, King Gustavus the First of Sweden enjoined the noblemen he commissioned to appoint officers to serve him — accountants, builders, craftsmen, teachers, scribes and others responsible for conducting the ordinary daily affairs of the kingdom.

The system worked so well it was incorporated into the Swedish army as a way to establish and maintain a cohesive, disciplined, well-trained force to protect lives and property in the kingdom. These ancient NCOs would honor their leader and pledge their loyalty by ceremoniously presenting him with a sword.

The sword, a symbol of truth, justice and power rightfully used, served as a token for all to see and know that here was a "leader among leaders" and a "man among men." This ceremony became known as the "Royal Order of the Sword."

It was passed through the ages, coming to America about the time of the Revolutionary War. It lay dormant for many years. The only known instance of its use was in the 1860s when Gen. Robert Lee was presented a sword by his command.

U.S. Air Force NCOs revised the "Royal Order of the Sword" ceremony and adopted it in 1967.

Don't let details slide; always show your pride

By Maj. Gen. Michael Wooley
Third Air Force commander

Ralph Waldo Emerson once noted: "What you are stands over you and thunders so that I cannot hear what you say to the contrary."

What does this mean in today's Air Force? I believe it means I should be able to spot professional airmen from across a parking lot, before they render a sharp salute and a verbal greeting.

I should be able to tell by the manner in which they carry themselves, with their heads held high and looking everyone in the eye, and by the crisply ironed uniforms bloused over freshly shined boots. It means those of us who serve don't just throw on a uniform because we have to. We wear it with pride because we choose to.

The men and women of the U. S. Air Force comprise the finest fighting force in the world. With few exceptions, they are honorable, brave warriors who have conducted themselves brilliantly in conflict. They embody the spirit of the heroes of past and give us great hope for the future.

Given what many of us have been through during our days in the Air Force — the end of the Cold War; downsizing; the Gulf War; operations Allied Force, Enduring Freedom, Iraqi Freedom and numerous others — focusing on military standards of dress and appearance may seem like getting "down in the weeds" with details. ## Farewell Freedom, Enduring Freedom and Noble Eagle. Our active-duty wings, Direct Reporting Units, and gained guard and reserve wings, collectively fought the war on terror by protecting our skies, protecting our forces and prosecuting the war in Iraq. In addition, many of our talented and dedicated airmen provided air and ground security for the winter Olympics.

The Combined Air Operations Center, with hundreds of 12th Air Force airmen and civilians, coordinated over 25,000 sorties and delivered more than 19,000 munitions to their targets. They used their invaluable Joint Expeditionary Forces Experiment 2002 expertise and software to speed information to the warfighter and ensure effective air and space command and control.

I am looking forward to my future duties as the Deputy Chief of Staff for Warfighting Integration because they are directly related to Command Air Combat Command and our Chief's vision – to develop our Air Operations Center as a weapon system.

We can all take great pride in the standup of the first ever 612th Theater Operations Group, lead by Col. Gina Giles, an extremely capable and devoted leader. She prosecuted the war on terror by working with the forward operating location commanders in Latin America. All of these commanders directly assisted host nations, all of the services, and interagencies in vital counter-drug operations. From the airman on the flight line to those on staffs, we have all lived through difficult times, yet they continue to excel at all of our core competencies.

The bottom line is that the 12th Air Force has been fortunate for our active, guard and reserve wings and DRU commanders' leadership, perseverance and dedication. I would hail our civilians' unrelenting pursuit of excellence. Your contributions and experience are invaluable and sincerely appreciated by our Air Force.

Allow me to say one special thank you to the leadership at Davis-Monthan for hosting 12th Air Force and USSOUTHAF so magnificently. Your support has been irreproachable and we all wish you luck in your upcoming operational readiness inspection.

As I head to the bedlam of the Beltway, we will miss the city that Robbin and I have called home for three years. Robbin and I have been so fortunate to come to know base and community civilian leaders, like the Davis Monthan Fifty, and peerless professionals from Argentina to South Dakota, literally from sea to shining sea. In this age of history changing events, I believe that you made a lasting difference. Thank you, farewell, and keep chargin!

Pride

tary men and women know, however, it is often the details that mean the difference between mission accomplishment and failure. I know how easy it is to let customs and courtesies slide when deployed, when trying to accomplish so much with so few people and resources, when we are all hyper-focused on life-or-death missions. But we are what the American people and our allies see and equate to the U.S. military.

If we "let the details slide," then who is to say what's next?

Everywhere I go I am consistently impressed by the sharp men and women I meet. Each of us who serves is a role model, an ambassador in blue.

For those who have gone before us, who have given their lives so that we could have this great Air Force, so that we could enjoy the wonders of freedom and liberty, we pledge our best.

Remember that each morning as you put on your uniform what it stands for. Then you will always look, act and be that ambassador.

D-M prepares for ORI

By Staff Sgt. Tammie Clark
355th Wing Public Affairs

Davis-Monthan Air Force Base members participated in an operational readiness exercise July 11 to 18.

The ORE tested the 355th Wing's ability to prepare for wartime deployments and to perform their jobs in a wartime environment. Participants of the ORE strived to improve their ability to work together as a cohesive team, through scenarios practiced which involved multiple squadrons.

The Wing will have a chance to prove past mistakes can be corrected and D-M has what it takes to deploy troops efficiently and perform effectively in wartime conditions during the upcoming September ORE.
